7. New conclusions:

Firstly, the thesis presents the central concept of the topic: The quality of disseminating Party resolutions to students in public higher education institutions in Hanoi is a synthesis of factors directly related to the dissemination of Party resolutions to students, including facilities and technology serving the dissemination of Party resolutions to students in public higher education institutions; it is reflected in the results of resolution dissemination, contributing to the implementation of Party resolutions, the political tasks of public higher education institutions, and the progress in learning, training, and maturity of students.

Secondly, the thesis has established a theoretical framework for the topic, clearly defining criteria for evaluating the quality of disseminating Party resolutions to students in public higher education institutions in Hanoi, including two typical and novel criteria: Firstly, the use of forms and methods for disseminating Party resolutions to students. Secondly, the results and effects of disseminating Party resolutions to students in public higher education institutions in Hanoi.

Thirdly, the thesis proposes two groundbreaking solutions to improve the quality of disseminating Party resolutions to students in public higher education institutions in Hanoi: 1) Innovating the forms and methods of disseminating resolutions to students in public higher education institutions in Hanoi; 2) Building a team of speakers who are both politically committed and professionally competent, meeting the requirements of innovating the dissemination of resolutions to students in public higher education institutions in Hanoi in the new situation.
